I really appreciated the poster on Telehealth technology. I was glad they placed in the competition. I did not see what was 'new' or innovative about the Back to the Basics poster, but I did like the overall look of it alot. I was very interested in the

Go PUP

Many great posters with good information to share across the WOC nurse's practice.

My favorite included a pressure injury algorithm.

The algorithm created for pressure ulcer evaluation/accuracy could be a very useful tool to help eliminate confusion regarding staging and when a wound is not pressure related. The PUP program is similar to the pressure ulcer prevention program we have a

Excellent, I wish there was a panel of the poster presenters that we could hear from and then question.

good variety. Am taking home several ideas to incorporate into my practice

Very good posters this year!

As always, I admire those that do poster presentations and research topics that need clarification.

I really liked the poster with the algorithm for staging pressure ulcers. The statistics of implementation on this poster where amazing to me. I also liked the poster on the uses of telehealth that can be used to help increase patient access to WOCN nurs Really good presentations. Will be helpful for staff to have examples for future poster presentations.

The lighting in the room did not contribute to effective poster viewing.

I was appreciative of the validation with using zinc/barrier cream for moisture associated skin damage and how it can help. This is something that helps and is cost effective and something we can teach caregivers. I also enjoyed the PUP pressure preventi

I wish there had been enough handout of each poster, they were really good.

Back to Basics and The More Eyes are already posted on my cork board to stimulate my immediate actions for my facility.

Enjoyed the different discussions

All of these posters were great. I did recognize one or two from previous conferences.

Diversified posters from different settings in health care very helpful and informative.

Great posters, great information!

I had hoped there would be more posters, but I got to speak to several of the authors and was impressed with the depth of information presented.

Would have liked talking to the poster presenters.

Each poster was an inspiration to continue to share information in this format. Thank you for the copies of the posters at each station. I was able to bring a copy back for my team.

i didn't see the poster presentation. i only came on Saturday, but reviewed them online

Yes it is very expensive to to treat wounds for our current scope of medical practice, in and out of the hospital setting. The tele-medical conferencing was a great idea. The effectiveness of cryopreserved amniotic suspension allograft in the spinal cord i Hope we have more next year.

Good group of entrees; liked the layout in the room

All the posters were well presented and the information was work related. I was very impressed with the poster on forming a pressure ulcer team to help decrease the number of hospital-acquired pressure ulcers . Another poster I was intrigued with was the all poster were informative and I will incorporate the knowledge into my practice.

LOVE THAT WE HAVE SO MANY POSTERS NOW. AND OF SUCH HIGH CALIBER!

The posters well presented and informative.

Poster were done well. Impressed with quality.

I reviewed all of the posters and there were 3 which I felt provided useful or supportive information for my practice. 1. Building Expert Consensus on including indicators of MAD Skin Damage. The pictures were good examples although I would like to have f

Well done. I liked the area they were placed. Easy to see. Excellent work!

Always enjoy the posters for number of reasons

The poster presentation was very informative and interesting.

I felt there was a good variety of posters submitted this year with very interesting topics. We are having trouble starting a skin care resource team and I will certainly use the information I learned from that particular poster. As an ostomy nurse I als

SWAT (Skin Wound Assessment Team as presented in Susan Dunzweiler's poster) has made a tremendous positive impact at HPRHS. Especially with newly hired nurses in terms of the evidence-based education team members are able to provide in real-time.

Thanks so much for having them available online. It was hard getting to them all. Also, several did not have handouts available, so I was able to print them from my home computer. Several contained information I will utilize in my practics.

I found Mary Arnold Long's poster to be most relevant to me at thsi time as I encourage a clinician to do a poster on ITD excellent posters!

I appreciated the poster presentations, but there seemed to be so few? Were there not many submitted?

I liked the poster presentation for ceu

good work on the posters

I was glad to see the poster demonstrating the efficacy of using barrier cream for dry, scaley lower extremity intact skin. I have been doing this in my practice for some time. Also received inspiration from poster on pup team to try to renew enthusiasm

All of the presenters did a great job with their posters. Interesting concepts presented. IAD and treatment was quite interested since this is an area I deal with on a constant bases in my practice. The poster using ophthalmic eye drops for wound care tr

thought provoking, well done

should have a time when authors are with their posters great posters!

Well done posters!

excellent posters and glad there is a reward for 3 .

excellent

I looked more thoroughly at the pressure ulcer prevention posters. I look to improve our current prevention program and these posters were very helpful.

back to the basics on staging pressure.. ulcers was so true and needs to be reintegrated with each nurse. The use of telehealth on reaching to areas where there are no wocn was very informative and gave new insight into broadend field of wocn nursing. Lo
